ESCORT 9500i RADAR DETECTOR

Is this the smartest detector on the planet? How would you like a Radar Detector that has a better memory than you? One that 6 month later remembers that it spotted a greedy revenuee hiding behind those trees on County Road 3 back in April and reminds you that you are approaching them in September. The Escort 9500i will do just that and so much more.

Using the Mark location button allows for you to program the 9500i, on the fly, when you see a hidden speed trap and stores the location and reminds you when you are approaching that trap in the future. Excellent.

Using what Escort calls TrueLock, you can manage those pesky automatic doors, by capturing the coordinates and frequency and storing it in the 9500i memory.

If you ride the same route repeatably this can almost save your sanity as false alarms will eventual become a thing of the past for you.

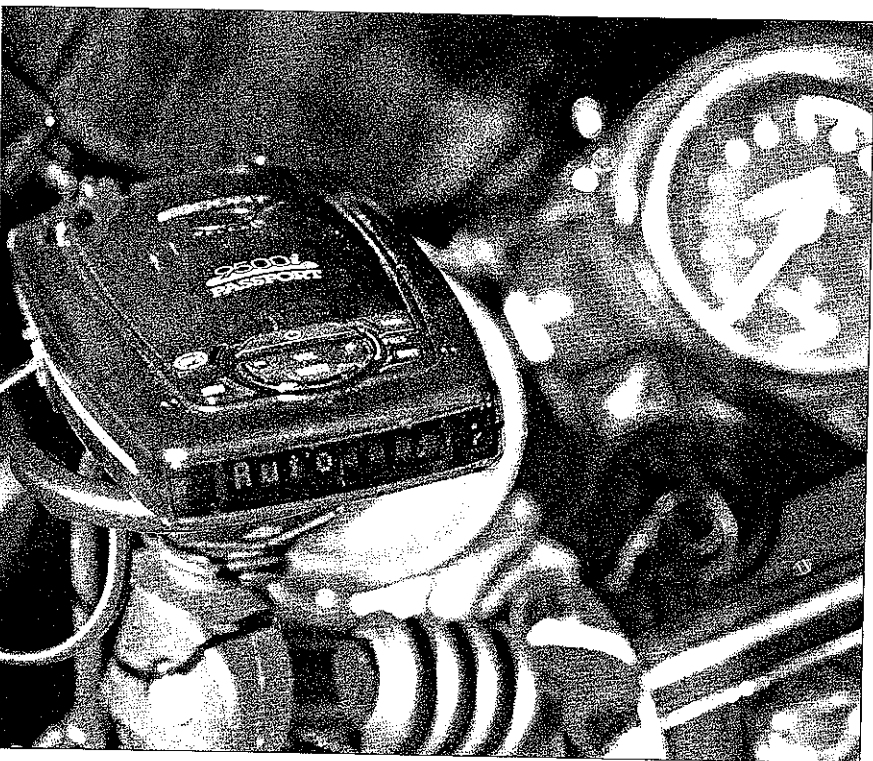

The detector has a 360-degree view of the road and running head to head with our Valentine One we found the 9500i to be that much quicker and accurate than the V1. Sometimes by a good margin. Very impressive.

When you do get painted by radar the 9500i tells you, in a clear female voice, what type and it displays how fast you were actually going. This allows you to make a judgment call and also gives you fodder for any court appearances that might come about. It has five brightness settings, sensitivity control and a built-in 1/8 ear jack for your communication systems. It also has a USB Port which will allow for any updates and improvements to the softwear and, eventually, for uploading of a national data base for Speed Traps and Red Light Cameras.

If you travel the 9500i also sees European Ku-Band - so there is no reason to help fund the EU.

All in all the new 9500i is the cutting edge in radar detection. It's smart, useful and miles ahead of the competition.

The Escort 9500i retails for $449 - money well spent, whether as a present for yourself or a loved one who has a heavy throttle hand. Available online at www.escortradar.com.
